Practice Analysis Update

Amie Hesbach, MSPT, CCRP, CCRT, ARSIG, President

I was reminded recently that I continue to refer to the ARSIG Practice Analysis. So some ask, "What the heck is a Practice Analysis?" and "Why is the ARSIG doing one?"

Further information about Practice Analyses, especially with regards to developing Postgraduate Clinical Residency and Fellowship Programs, is found on the APTA Web site. An excellent answer to our first question, "What is a practice analysis?" is found here. "A practice analysis is a systematic plan of study of the professional practice behaviors and knowledge that comprise a specialty area of practice. The purpose of the practice analysis is to collect data that reliably and accurately describes what knowledge and skills are necessary to practice in a given area of specialization."

Steps in the Practice Analysis "process" that have been completed by the ARSIG include:

1. Identify a practice analysis coordinator.
2. Develop the pilot survey.
3. Field test the pilot survey.
4. Analyze pilot data.
5. Revise the survey, if necessary.
6. Submit the revised survey to the Committee.
7. Conduct the practice analysis survey.

Our "next steps" are:

8. Analyze the practice analysis survey results.
9. Interpret practice analysis survey results.
10. Submit the full technical report to the Committee.

The process, we're finding, is slow but deliberate, and, overall, very exciting. We hope that the results of our Practice Analysis will be published in the near future and cited in future animal rehabilitation/physical therapy educational and legislative plans. We are indebted to our National Advisory Group as well as those who tested our pilot survey. We'll certainly keep you up to date on our progress.
